Mullen

Mullen, a full service advertising firm, was moving from its suburban Boston office to its present city center location. For a multi-disciplinary firm with a continuing need for creative talent, Mullen was sensitive to the need for an inviting and conducive working environment.

The firm was going from 90% private offices to an 80% open plan and had to deal with very difficult floor plans. They needed a leg-based system with a 120-degree configuration capability and that would meet a tight budget. Tayco's Up System was chosen because of its simple engineering ability to reconfigure and ease of installation. "Tayco is very easy to do business with and very responsive to suggested changes. Mullen was one of the most seamless projects I have ever done", Larry Berger, TPG Architecture.
