our culture

office furniture in your comfort zone.

Tayco was established in 1976, with the acquisition of the rights to one of the first freestanding acoustical partitions in North America, when president Phil Philips embarked on a journey to realize his dream of leading a company.

As the dynamics of office life progressed over time, partitions morphed into systems and became Tayco's core strength. With support from freestanding casegoods, seating, boardroom furniture, and various accessory products, Tayco now boasts an impressive portfolio of solutions that responds to the requirements of today's workplace.

Beyond our function as a manufacturer of office furniture products, Tayco is a company with a conscience. Striving to minimize our environmental impact, raising funds for charities, and giving back to the community are all essential elements of Tayco's culture.

"Tayco has come a great distance since the beginning and will continue to evolve as the marketplace and the needs of our customers change. We are very optimistic about the future."

Concern for the environment has changed the way we live, work, and play. At Tayco, we find new ways to minimize our impact on the environment each day. Environmental consideration is evident in the development of our products, the materials we use, our industrial processes, and every aspect of our manufacturing, sales and delivery chain.

Driven by the increasing stewardship of our customers, implementing and adhering to environmental and sustainable standards are our responsibilities as a manufacturer and our obligation to the planet. Accordingly, Tayco has earned GREENGUARD Certification for indoor air quality and complies with the stringent requirements of the Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Green Building Rating System.

“We proudly demonstrate our commitment to the environment each day, throughout every facet of the organization. Collectively, our efforts are making the world a healthier place to live.”
